‘A landmark going up in flames’

Suit Corner. The half-century old establishment at Third and Market streets in Old City caught fire Wednesday morning and smoke billowed out the entire day.

A scary situation. After some time, firefighters had to let the building burn, saying it was too risky to go inside.

Fire crews battle all-day blaze inside Suit Corner

Two-alarm. The clothing shop at Third and Market streets was destroyed in a fire that burned for most of the day.

"When I got to the top of the block, it was real smoky. It looked like the block got blown up. ... There was smoke everywhere and fire engines. I was like, 'It's going down!'"

A two-alarm fire at the Suit Corner shop in Old City broke out about 9 a.m. Wednesday and was still burning as of press time.

"It's the worst type of thing to catch fire," said Lucien Lewis, 43, who sells stone carvings in the area. "That was the clothing spot. ... That's a lot of suits, and a lotta, lotta, lotta stuff up in flames."

Eight employees were in the store when the fire broke out, according to reports. Flames were still licking up from the roof at 1 p.m., and Market Street was closed between Second and Fourth streets as firefighters kept water on the structure.

One firefighter said they had no choice but to let the fire burn itself out, as entering the building would be too risky.

"When I got to the top of the block, it was real smoky. It looked like the block got blown up," Lewis recalled.

"There was a little girl lying on the ground, I guess she sprained her ankle. There was smoke everywhere, and fire engines. I was like, 'It's going down!'"

One firefighter required medical attention but no other injuries occurred.

The building was the final remnant of the Suit, Shoe, Pants and Shirt Corner stores.

"There was no explosion, just the fire coming out," said the Rev. Boyzell Williams, 64, who saw the fire start.

"I'm saddened because I was gonna buy a suit there next week. I've been going there since 1973," he said. "To me, that's a landmark going up in flames. ... That's a piece of history."

Instacart adds Green Aisle Grocery to list

Max DiMezza shops at Green Aisle Grocery in South Philadelphia. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Same-day delivery service Instacart announced today it's added Green Aisle Grocery, a popular locally sourced food boutique on Passyunk Avenue with a second location opening on Grays Ferry Avenue.

Instacart launched in the city in February and has a growing list of clients who order from places such as BJ's and Whole Foods, and even wine and liquor from Fine Wines & Good Spirits.

Metro exclusive

Instacart is offering a discount to Metro readers: $10 off and free delivery on your first order.

- Code: MetroPhilly

"It's just been amazing," said George Shotz, local operations manager. "Everyone seems to really appreciate the service."

After an order is placed, buyers will do your shopping for you. And even if you order from three separate stores, it will all be delivered within an hour. You can even start an order list online and send a link to someone else, who can also add items.

Shotz said Philly is a great spot for this kind of service, especially since there are not many non-drivers these days.

Nutter signed a bill that effectively adds the devices to the citywide smoking ban. The ban will take effect July 1, and includes "vaping" in workplaces, bars, restaurants and other public spaces. 'Black Thought' helps push forward Point Breeze mural

Nice 'thought.' Tariq Trotter wanted to honor his longtime friend Shawn White, aka "Air Smooth," a community activist, emcee and father.

Tariq "Black Thought" Trotter said now it's Shawn's turn.

After a mural was created at World Communications Charter School and dedicated last May to his Grammy Award-winning group The Roots, Trotter quickly developed plans with the Mural Arts Program to honor his recently deceased friend.

Trotter, a native of South Philadelphia, announced at Audenried Charter High School on Wednesday morning that a mural will be painted in honor of his longtime friend and well-known community activist Shawn L. White.

Dubbed the "ASpire" project, the mural will celebrate the life of White, who died suddenly last year days after his 41st birthday following a short battle with heart disease and high blood pressure. The mural will go up at 2059 Dickenson St. in Point Breeze and be created this spring and summer. It's scheduled to be dedicated in October.

"Shawn was very dedicated to the community, especially young African-American men," said Trotter, 42. "He always wanted to make sure we were making the best choices that we could."

A series of workshops and programs focusing on AIDS/HIV awareness and conflict resolution, among others, will accompany the creation of the artwork.

"I hope this mural and the workshops we are going to be doing in conjunction will keep Shawn's vision alive and help people to understand that we need to take better care of ourselves and each other," Trotter said.

Quoted

"[Tariq] never forgets about Philly, and he never forgets who was in his life, who helped make him what he is today."

Jane Golden, executive director of the Mural Arts Program

Dreaming big

Trotter said he and White would make music together in Shawn's grandmother's basement at 22nd and Mifflin streets, and talk about making it big.

- "And even though we went into different fields," he said, "we both made our dreams come true."

Clinton not running (yet), but her name raises money

As Hillary Clinton weighs a run for president in 2016, at least a dozen independent groups have sprung up to raise money in her name.

Sporting names such as Madam Hillary 2016, HillaryFTW and other variations on Clinton's name, the new crop of political action committees is a sign of the 66-year-old's enduring star power more than 20 years after she first became a national figure as the wife of President Bill Clinton. REUTERS

Stabbing. Student wielding knife injures 21 people in Pa. school

A 16-year-old student wielding two knives went on a stabbing rampage in the hallways of a Pittsburgh-area high school Wednesday, injuring 21 people, about half of them seriously, officials said.

The attacker moved stealthily through Franklin Regional High School, stabbing his victims in the torso and slashing arms and faces before anyone realized what was happening, students and officials said. Some of the injured taken to nearby hospitals were in critical condition, doctors said.

Students described a scene of panic, with the school hastily evacuated after a fire alarm was pulled. The unidentified sophomore suspected in the attack was in police custody, said Tom Seefeld, the chief of police in Murrysville, Pa.

The attacker, described by a classmate as a quiet person who kept to himself, started his rampage about 7:13 a.m., going along the hallways to several classrooms at the school in Murrysville, about 20 miles east of Pittsburgh, officials said.

An armed security officer subdued and arrested the suspect with help from the principal, Seefeld said.

A total of 21 people, most of them 14 to 17 years old, were transported to area hospitals, four by medical helicopter. Several had life-threatening injuries, with nine in critical condition, hospital officials said. REUTERS

Trial. Pistorius made to view graphic photo of girlfriend's skull

A South African prosecutor forced Oscar Pistorius on Wednesday to look at a forensic photograph that showed the head of his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp after it was blown open by a hollow-point bullet fired by the Olympic and Paralympic track star.

In a dramatic opening to his cross-examination of Pistorius, prosecutor Gerrie Nel made him admit he had killed Steenkamp then later confronted him with the photograph showing the side and back of her skull, her hair matted with blood and brains.

"Have a look there. I know you don't want to because you don't want to take responsibility," Nel said to gasps from the packed public gallery. REUTERS

How many 53-year-olds look like this?

Reigning queen of comedy Julia Louis-Dreyfus graces the cover of April 24's Rolling Stone magazine, due out this week. And she's nude! And she looks incredible! I'm 20 years younger than her and our bodies don't even compare. Excuse me while I cry at my desk.

The "Veep" star, who has continued to find success long after the days of "Seinfeld" and "The New Adventures of Old Christine," last made the cover in 1998. Now, she wears only the words of the Constitution painted on her back. However, it's signed by John Hancock, who only put his, well, John Hancock, on the Declaration of Independence.

We're willing to look past this Rolling Stone snafu since it's such a hot cover. The unnecessary signature is only about an inch above her perfectly placed lower back dimples. Again, crying at my desk.

Still no answers in Geldof death

Autopsy reports are in for model and British socialite Peaches Geldof but the results are inconclusive, officials say. Toxicology reports could reveal the cause of death; however, results from that aren't expected for several weeks, U.K. police said.

The 25-year-old daughter of Irish musician Bob Geldof was found dead Monday at her Wrotham, Kent, home. Her rock star husband Tom Cohen said earlier this week that he would bring up their two young kids, Astala and Phaedra, "with their mother in their hearts every day."

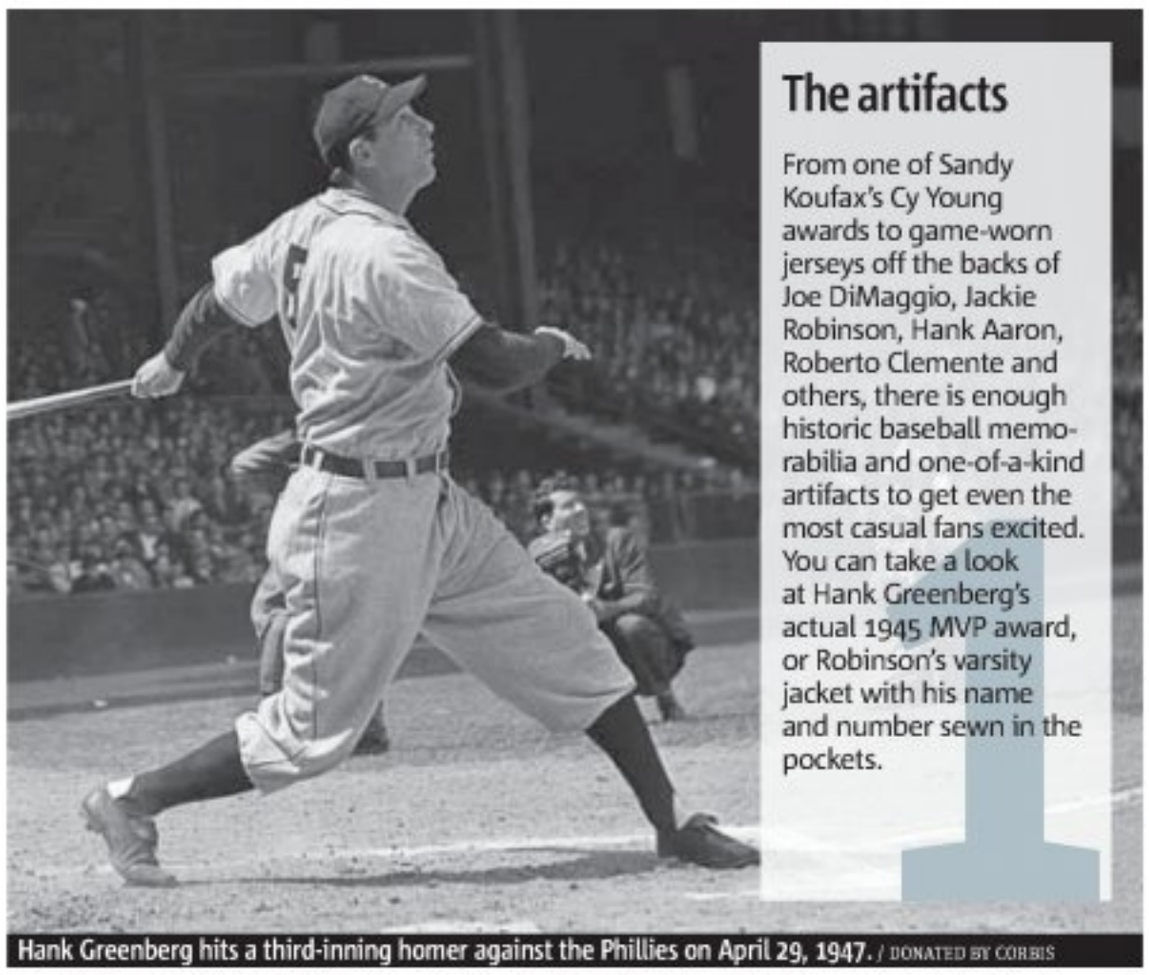
Find out what rabbis have to do with baseball at the National Museum of American Jewish History.



Hank Greenberg hits a third-inning homer against the Phillies on April 29, 1947. / DONATED BY CORBIS

The artifacts

From one of Sandy Koufax's Cy Young awards to game-worn jerseys off the backs of Joe DiMaggio, Jackie Robinson, Hank Aaron, Roberto Clemente and others, there is enough historic baseball memorabilia and one-of-a-kind artifacts to get even the most casual fans excited. You can take a look at Hank Greenberg's actual 1945 MVP award, or Robinson's varsity jacket with his name and number sewn in the pockets.

The story

"Take Me Out to the Ball Game" was written by a Jewish songwriter who had never seen a baseball game. And rabbis all across New York City and other urban places during the first part of the 20th century stressed to new immigrants looking for acceptance that to love baseball is to become a real American.

Who's who

Home run champion Jose Bautista is Jewish, as are one-time NL MVP Ryan Braun; Marvin Miller, the Players Union lawyer who created free agency; and Theo Epstein, the youngest MLB general manager of all time. We were surprised to learn just how many owners, players and other baseball figures had Jewish lineage.

What you'll see

'Rio 2'

1 The animated aviary adventure finds its two literal lovebirds — blue macaws voiced by Jesse Eisenberg and Anne Hathaway — heading into "Meet the Parents" territory, when they visit the latter's family deep in the Amazon.

2 'Draft Day'
The latest in the Kevin Costner Comeback Machine returns the actor to sports, the subject of some of his best work. "Bull Durham" may be the best baseball movie, though this will have to settle for being the best about a football general manager.

3 'Oculus'
Thanks to the "Paranormal Activity" series and "The Conjuring," ghosts are back in, meaning the marketplace will be flooded with them for some time. This one involves a scary mirror.

MATT PRIGGE

4 'Cuban Fury'
Nick Frost pulls "Marty" duty by playing a sad sack in love with a girl (Rashida Jones) out of his league. When he discovers she's a salsa dancer, he taps into his own history as an ace toe-tapper.

5 'The Raid 2'
There's technically no raid in this sequel to the Indonesian super-martial arts picture "The Raid: Redemption." But there are countless epic beatdowns — plus, unfortunately, a story this time, which might not have been a step-up from the first.

6 'Dom Hemingway'
Jude Law tears into the role of a motormouthed English gangster who, after being released from prison, tries to get rich and maybe reconnect with his daughter (Emilia Clarke).

7 'Joe'
In last year's "Mud," Tye Sheridan played a boy who befriends an ex-con played by Matthew McConaughey. This year he plays a boy who befriends an ex-con played by Nicolas Cage, in a film by David Gordon Green ("George Washington," "Pineapple Express").

Power play

An idealist

Do you really think Cyrus is devoted to government? Or is that a lie his id tells his superego, so he can seek power?
I wouldn't rule out your supposition. But I'm going to hold dear to the belief that there is idealism in the fundamental fabric of the guy. It's only one piece of the puzzle, but I think it is intact. And as long as I'm playing him, it will be, because I don't understand the guy if that isn't somewhere in there.

Jeff Perry is reading all of your tweets

Interview. The "Scandal" actor likens the series' Twitter action to feel of live theater.

Cyrus Beene, the White House Chief of Staff on ABC's hit drama "Scandal," is rarely happy and usually on the brink of cardiac arrest. But Jeff Perry, the actor who plays Beene, is, he says, "grinning until it hurts" over the chance to portray a character "written with depth, complexity and dichotomy by Shonda [Rhimes]." It's something he says he hasn't had enough of since his days performing with the Steppenwolf Theatre Company in Chicago, which he co-founded. This complexity — there are almost no clear villains or heroes on "Scandal," rare on a major network show — is also what's won millions of very vocal fans. And the cast keeps these fans through constant social media contact.

Perry says the online interaction he has with fans is reminiscent of the live-theater experience.

"It feels unique in television and history, this level of while-it's-happening conversation, with 70,000 people talking to each other at once," Perry says. "It feels like when I was in 88 seats and we had our 300 subscribers, and we had a dialogue with them and got to know them."

The cast also has fun with social media on set. Says Perry, "We tease each other: 'I'm Instagramming this!' 'Do I have your permission to tweet this picture of you with your pants around your ankles because they're ripped and being tailored for the next shot?'"

"Scandal" airs its finale on April 17.

Get the perfect blowout at home

Beauty. Experts from DreamDry and Drybar share their secrets for getting the style down pat.

Quoted

"Most people don't know this, but it's not just about using heat to dry your hair. It's about putting minerals into your hair, which actually help you have that bounce and shine." Alli Webb, Drybar founder

For most of us, heading to a salon for a blowout every morning before work just isn't affordable or practical. We chatted with two women who know a thing or two about blowouts, Drybar founder Alli Webb and Jenn Bradford, a senior stylist at DreamDry, so you can use their top notch tricks at home.

1 First, it's important to have the right products. Drybar's Webb highly suggests investing in a good hair dryer. "Most people don't know this, but it's not just about using heat to dry your hair. It's about putting minerals into your hair, which actually help you have that bounce and shine," she says. Next, make sure you're using the right brush for your hair type. "If you have thin, less coarse hair, use a ceramic round brush. For coarse hair, use a boar bristle round brush," DreamDry's Bradford says.

2 After you wash your hair, apply a thermal protector from mid to bottom to protect your hair from the dryer's heat and to help it dry smoothly. Bradford favors Kerastase Ciment Thermique. Then, rough dry your hair with a towel until it's 75 to 80 percent dry. "This is so important because if you don't rough dry your hair, it will be sopping wet and the drying process will take forever to blow dry," says Bradford.

3 Next, divide your hair into three sections — one on each side and one in the middle — and clip up each section with alligator clips. Let down the sections one at a time as you blow dry. Webb's expert trick is working in very small sections, of about 1 to 2 inches. Both women recommend starting with the front and sides, since that is what people see the most. "To give your hair volume, hold the brush horizontally so it's parallel with your head and roll over your hair with the brush multiple times," Webb advises. "If you want curls, hold the brush vertically. Picture a curl and mimic that shape with the brush."

4 Continue this process for all the 2-inch subsections within the three main sections your hair is divided in. Do the back last since you'll already be in the groove of it and have the movement down. Once the hair is dry, finger-brush in a shine serum starting halfway down your hair. Webb uses The Chaser, from Drybar's product line. Last, spritz hairspray so the volume holds all day.

Follow these tips to get Drybar's Straight Up style (above) or DreamDry's Stevie style (left) at home. / PROVIDED

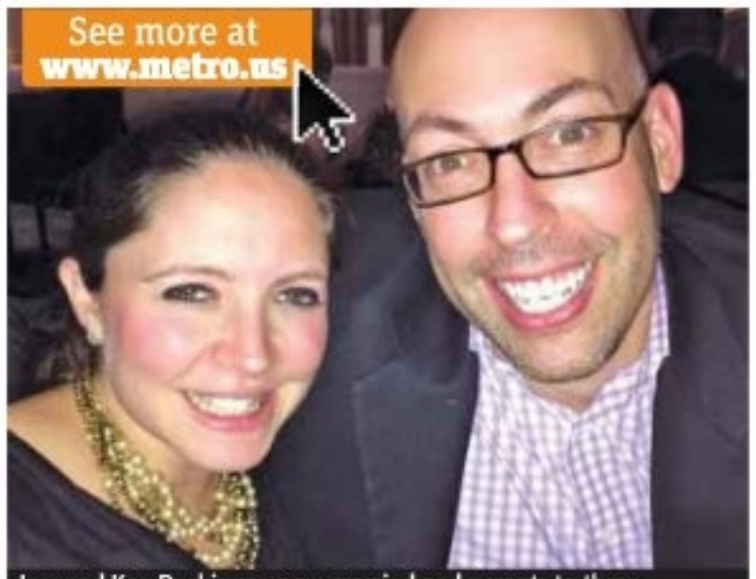
Dating, with references

Intros. A new dating site relies on women to refer available men in their social circle.



Jess and Ken Deckinger, now married and parents to three daughters, created the site to help people meet the same way they met each other. / PROVIDED

Jess, Meet Ken is a website that represents both a love story and a business idea. "It really is how we met and how we fell in love," says Jessica Deckinger of JessMeetKen.com, the dating site she recently launched with her husband — you guessed it — Ken.

Here's how it works: Women recommend single men in their life to other single women online. Jess and Ken met on a defunct website similar to the one the couple now runs with their business partner, Adele Tongish.

The dating world is nothing new for her and Ken; they co-founded HurryDate, which organizes speed-dating events, in 2001 and sold the company several years later.

"This cuts through the noise of online dating and provides you with a true and honest way to meet people in their most genuine form," Ken says of the Boston-based company.

Rather than dealing with the "dating fatigue" that comes from sorting through an overflowing inbox of emails from potential suitors, women can connect with another woman who cares about the guy she posted. And that's the key. "Every woman wants to get to the core of who that guy is from someone who knows him very well," he says.

Plus, there's an extra connection when a woman can relate to the woman who's vouching for the guy she's posting about. "I didn't know Adele, but she looked like someone I would be friends with," says Jess, who felt she could relate to Tongish because of the funny profile she created for Ken. In turn, she could relate to Ken, too.

Ken says a guy doesn't always post what a woman wants to see. "He doesn't know how to present his redeeming qualities as well as a woman can present them to other women," he confesses. It certainly worked for them.

Quoted

"[Guys don't] know how to present [their] redeeming qualities as well as a woman can present them to other women." Ken Deckinger

Two scoops

You scream, I scream

"It's a great way to survey the landscape of other farmers, producers and companies in our area," says Little Baby's Ice Cream co-founder Pete Angevine about the fest. "It can lead to partnerships and collaborations, two things we're very interested in." Stop by the ice cream tricycle for a mini-scoop of ice cream so peculiar and delicious that it had to come from Philly.

What's new at the Philly Farm and Food Fest

R. KENNEDY FOR VISIT PHILADELPHIA

Organic. Think of it as a giant farmers market — with oysters and booze.

The Philly Farm and Food Fest, the brainchild of Fair Food Philly and the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture, is back for its third year. The festival is bringing in even more vendors purveying local, organic and fair-trade goods, and organizers keep dreaming up new ways to educate and entice guests. On Sunday, the Convention Center will have a few new faces, as well as several vendors who were there for the inaugural year and continue to return each April.

Last year, the fest's organizers brought in something that was painfully absent in the first go: booze. The Libations Lounge — which, yes, is back this weekend — provided tastings of locally brewed and distilled spirits. In addition, there will be a Shellfish Salon, with seafood tastings, led by the owner of Samson St. Oyster House, Sam Mink.

Brian Harman is the oyster farm manager for Atlantic Cape Fisheries, Inc. In 1997, Jersey-based ACF teamed up with Rutgers University to experiment with commercial farming of Cape May Salt Oysters. The results were more than a little successful. "[We want to] deliver the message that the most delicious oysters on the East Coast are being grown sustainably right here in southern New Jersey," says Harman. "We really love getting to interact with the public and educate people about the environmental benefits of oyster farming," he adds.

Harman isn't the only one who recognizes the importance of speaking directly with customers. Casey Spacht, GM at Lancaster Farm Fresh Cooperative, feels the same. "I see this as another way to get more people connected to farms," explains Spacht.

LFFC has emphatically manned a booth at the festival from the very beginning. "I first heard about the fest from [founders] Ann Karlan and Marilyn Anthony," says Spacht. "They asked what I thought about a large farming event in Philadelphia. I didn't miss a beat and said, 'Yes, we will support this. Actually, it might have been, 'Hell yes!'"

Keeping it in the Sbraga family

Hot Chef. You have Aaron Gottesman to thank (or blame) for Fat Ham's fiery "hot chicken."

Aaron Gottesman lists peas among his favorite ingredients this time of year. / VANESSA BEAHN

Chef Aaron Gottesman went from Kevin Sbraga's namesake Center City restaurant to Fat Ham, the more intimate Sbraga affair in University City. He's chef de cuisine at a place that's busy just about every night of the week, and chances are you can find at least one person in the dining room at all times that came for the hot chicken — and we're warning you now, they mean "hot" as in "your mouth will be on fire." Good thing there are plenty of options on that extensive whiskey list to wash it down.

How was the transition from Sbraga to Fat Ham?
I wanted to try to run this restaurant as similarly as I could to Sbraga. A lot of the systems that are put in place here work. It's still a different space but everything is going really well. Having limited space is nice. The busier it is, the more people want to be here. It's great to see that people are willing to wait, which is better than having a big space with a lot of empty tables.

Where are you grabbing a drink after work?
I'd say that a lot of people within the [Sbraga] organization go to Pub & Kitchen. It's a good in-between spot for both restaurants. Generally we go to St. Declan's [Well] since it's right here. They know all of us, and we know them. It's easy to pop in there after work since everyone lives in different neighborhoods.

What's your neighborhood?
Queen Village. I go to Ela a lot. I know Jason [Cichonski, the chef and owner] and it's basically right across the street from my apartment.

Over the river

Fat Ham is part of this new restaurant push in University City. What do you think of the area?
I had really no experience with the restaurants in this area. But there are so many people here with the schools — both employees and students — that there's a market for the restaurants. There's a lot of room out here for new stuff. Zavino just opened a new location here, and same with Federal Donuts. That really shows where this area is going.

Even safety does not justify means

Re: 'Torture in the name of US freedom' (Metro, April 8) I am appalled and saddened by the opinions of letter writer Mary Ruggiero. She claims Rep. Pelosi and Sen. Feinstein "do not love this country." I love this country; in fact I joined the Army and went to Kosovo and Iraq in support of it. Yet I will never condone the torture of human beings, whether they are terrorists or anyone else. I understand the desire to be safe, but we do not achieve that through torture. We lose our soul as a country — not to mention the souls of those compelled to conduct those interrogation techniques.

Inquiring minds want 'Iron Chef' previews

I'm just curious — I've been reading Metro for years, but I've never seen any shows that I watch on the "TV watch list." How come you never report on the "NCIS" shows or "Criminal Minds" or "Law & Order: SVU" or "Kitchen Nightmares" or "Chopped" or "Iron Chef"? That's just a portion of what I watch, but I've never seen any shows that I actually watch in your paper.

No. 5

"Rocky" vs. tradition

Boston College will be making its 24th trip to the Frozen Four, with five national championships on its resume. North Dakota is going for the 21st time. It has seven titles. For Minnesota, this is No. 20. The Golden Gophers have won five. And Union? The little school of 2,500 from upstate New York will be making only its second Frozen Four appearance.

5 Reasons to watch the Frozen Four

This Frozen Four, the latest big event to pass through these parts, has nothing to do with Princess Anna or any other characters from the popular Disney movie featuring an all-star cast. But it does have everything to do with deciding the NCAA's best on ice.

The fun starts at 5 p.m. Thursday when Boston College, led by Johnny Gaudreau, a local kid from South Jersey who is considered the favorite to win the Hobey Baker Award as the game's best player, takes on Union College.

Union boasts Flyers draft choice and highly-regarded defenseman Shayne Gostisbehere.

In the second game it will be traditional bitter rivals Minnesota and North Dakota, who have met 284 times but none this year due to Conference realignments, taking the ice around 8:30 p.m.

The survivors meet for the National championship 7:30 p.m. Saturday. We look at five of the top storylines to watch this weekend.

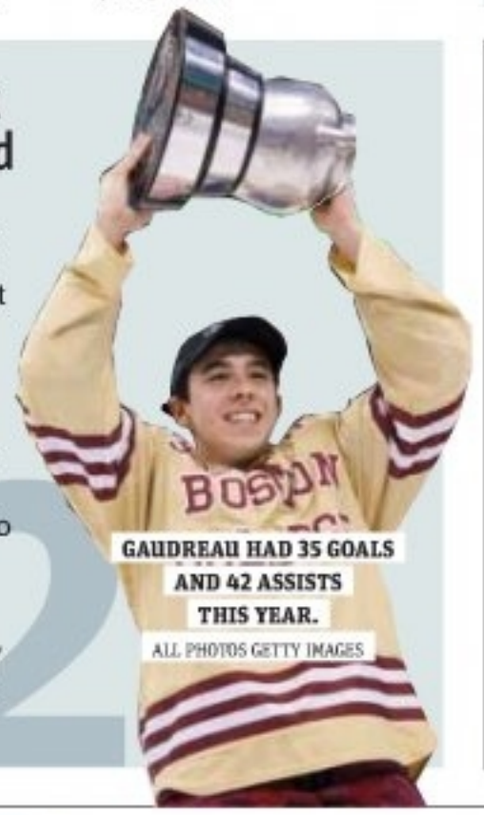
Gaudreau back where it started

The Frozen Four won't be Boston College star Johnny Gaudreau's first time on Wells Fargo Center ice. He once played for "Mites on Ice" between periods of a Flyers game years ago.

"It's pretty special to get a chance to come home and play in the Frozen Four before all my family and friends," said Gaudreau, a 2011 Calgary draftee.



GAUDREAU HAD 35 GOALS AND 42 ASSISTS THIS YEAR.

Come Back Shayne

Flyers fans, who have only heard his name are anxious to see Union's highly rated defenseman Shayne Gostisbehere in person.

Depending on how things play out, they're hoping he'll turn pro after this season and perhaps be wearing the orange and black on this same ice next year.

"He's a pretty dynamic player who brings people out of their seats," said Union coach Rick Bennett of Philadelphia's 2012 third-round draft pick.

You Guys Again

Over 67 years Minnesota and North Dakota have banged heads 284 times, including the 1979 championship game, won by the Gophers. Minnesota leads the series 138-130-15. That all changed when realignment split them apart.

"To play North Dakota is one of our favorite games," said Minnesota's Nate Condon, whose 27-6-6 club has been No. 1 most of the season. "Being in a Frozen Four setting even more so."

The Gophers are excited to play North Dakota.

PATRIOTS COACH BILL BELICHICK GAVE THE EAGLES A PEP TALK.

Rust vs. Rest

It's been 11 days since the field for the Frozen Four was finalized. That means the combatants have had plenty of time to rest up, study their opponent and try to channel their energy until now. While that's let injured players have time to heal, it also has to concern coaches their players might be a little rusty.

"We're certainly used to it," said Boston College's Jerry York, whose club got a recent pep talk from Patriots' head coach Bill Belichick. "We drew a bye and had to sit 10 days before the tournament, so this is par for the course. You just have to start from scratch and have good practices."

Flyers look to improve their seed

NHL. With three games remaining, it's all about postseason positioning now.

After the Flyers took a commanding 4-0 lead in Florida against the Panthers Tuesday night, the Flyers no longer need to worry about whether they will be able to lock up a playoff spot. It is now all about who they might play.

"We want to finish as high as possible; obviously home ice would be nice in the first round," Scott Hartnell said after the 5-2 victory.

The Flyers have three games left and trail the Rangers by two points, but the Rangers have played one more game.

This means, statistically, Philadelphia could win its three games (earning six points) and be tied with New York for the No. 2 spot in the Metropolitan Division. And, if the Rangers falter in one of their two contests, the Flyers could pass them outright.

If the playoffs started Wednesday, Philly would be the No. 6 seed and play Montreal. The Flyers face Tampa, currently the No. 4 seed, Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

NCAA. Frozen Four joins championships hosted by Philly

The Frozen Four will now join the 2011 NCAA Wrestling Championships and 2000 Women's Final Four as NCAA championships decided in Philadelphia. But the list of big events to call Philadelphia — and especially the Wells Fargo Center — home since the building opened in 1996 is long and impressive.

It's played host to the NCAA's men's tournament opening weekend on three occasions, most recently last year — as well as the 2001 Eastern Regionals. And who will ever forget the 1992 Eastern Regionals finale at the Spectrum where Christian Laettner and Duke edged Kentucky 104-103 in overtime in what many call the greatest game ever played?

Besides that, there were the 1998 U.S. Figure Skating championships, the 2002 NBA All-Star Game, 2008 U.S. Olympic Team gymnastics trials, NHL All-Star Game and even the 2000 Republican National Convention, not to mention hundreds of concerts.

Clearly, then, this is familiar turf (or pond in this case) for the city, which depending on how things go this weekend, has already considered bidding for the 2019 Frozen Four.

You wonder can an Olympic bid be far behind?

Eagles preseason

Birds open schedule with Chicago

The NFL released its preseason schedules Wednesday, and the Eagles will begin with an exhibition against the Bears, somewhere between Aug. 7 and 9 at Soldier Field.

The Eagles will face the Patriots in Foxboro a week later after holding a series of preseason workouts together in New England prior to the game.

The Eagles will have consecutive home games following their trip north, hosting the Steelers and then Michael Vick and the Jets.

It is the 14th straight season that will see the Eagles end their preseason against New York's AFC team.

Exact dates are to be determined.

The NFL also announced Wednesday that Arizona will host the 2015 Pro Bowl, and that the event will return to Hawaii the following season. METRO

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Bruins (53-18-8)

With a win on Thursday in Winnipeg, coupled with a loss by St. Louis at Minnesota, the Bruins can capture their second ever Presidents' Trophy. By going 6-1-3 in its last 10 games, Boston has created some separation between itself and St. Louis. For the B's, it's all about getting rest for their key players before the postseason begins next week.

No. 2

Ducks (51-20-8)

The race for the top seed in the West has unexpectedly become interesting with St. Louis' swoon. Anaheim is 6-3-1 in its last 10 games.

No. 3

Blues (52-20-7)

They built up plenty of cushion, but Blues fans have to be getting a little worried heading into the playoffs. St. Louis has lost its last three games.

No. 4

Avalanche (51-21-7)

The Avalanche are the opposite of the Blues. They are playing really well heading into the games that really count.

No. 5

Sharks (49-21-9)

The Sharks have been treading water lately. They are three points behind Anaheim but they have an outside chance at winning the Pacific Division.

No. 6

'Hawks (45-19-15)

Chicago has won its last three games and the better news is that they should get Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews back in the playoffs.

No. 7

Penguins (50-24-5)

Most people feel as though Bruins-Penguins in the Eastern Conference Finals is a foregone conclusion.

No. 8

Canadiens (45-27-7)

Fun fact: the Canadiens will be the only Canadian team in the 2014 Stanley Cup playoffs. Montreal is going to be the three or four seed.

No. 9

Kings (45-28-6)

The Kings have dropped their last two games, but are still 7-3-0 in their past 10 games. They are locked into the sixth or seventh seed.

No. 10

Wild (42-26-12)

The Wild rallied for a thrilling 4-3 shootout win over Boston on Tuesday. Before the game had even ended, they clinched.

No. 11

Lightning (43-27-9)

This team's playoff hopes come with a 6-foot-7 asterisk. Big Ben Bishop hurt his wrist Tuesday and the goaltender's availability is cloudy at best.

No. 12

Rangers (44-31-5)

They are two points behind Tampa Bay and have only two games left but the Rangers could leapfrog the Lightning into fourth place in the East.

No. 13

Flyers (41-29-9)

The key now for the Flyers is to avoid Boston for as long as it can since the Bruins swept the season series (3-0).

No. 14

Stars (39-29-11)

You can't overstate the importance of Dallas' 3-2 win over Nashville on Tuesday. That kept the Stars two points ahead of Phoenix for the eighth seed.

No. 15

B'Jackets (41-31-7)

Columbus has won its last two games and the Blue Jackets end the regular season with three games on the road (Dallas, Tampa Bay and Florida).
